GetMusic Launches Innovative Subscription-Based Platform to Disrupt the Music Production Market

GetMusic disrupts the music market with a $29/mo unlimited beat subscription, empowering artists and supporting real producers with AI-powered search tools.

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES, July 17, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- GetMusic, an emerging music technology startup, officially announced the launch of its innovative platform, designed to revolutionize how independent artists and music producers collaborate and trade.

> We believe in using modern technology like AI to help artists find music, but we strongly stand against AI replacing real human producers."

By introducing a flat-rate monthly subscription model, GetMusic aims to replace the outdated pay-per-beat marketplace structure with a streamlined, unlimited-access ecosystem.

Traditionally, independent recording artists have been forced to buy individual beat leases, often costing anywhere from $30 to $100 per track for basic MP3 rights. This classic transactional model significantly limits an artist's creative output and financial freedom. GetMusic solves this industry bottleneck by offering a $29/month unlimited subscription, granting artists unrestricted downloads of high-quality beats, complete with commercial release rights.
To enhance the user experience, GetMusic has integrated advanced artificial intelligence solely to improve workflow. The platform features an AI-powered search engine that allows artists to find the perfect beat instantly by analyzing a reference track. However, the company takes a strict stance against fully AI-generated music. GetMusic does not host or support AI-created beats, dedicating its catalog exclusively to real, human producers and protecting the value of authentic musicianship.

"The current industry model is outdated and creates unnecessary barriers for talent," said the CEO and Co-Founder of GetMusic. "Our goal is to democratize music creation. By removing the financial limits of buying beats one by one, we empower artists to experiment, produce more music, and scale their careers without compromise. We believe in using modern technology like AI to help artists find music, but we strongly stand against AI replacing real human producers."

The platform is equally beneficial for music producers. Rather than chasing one-time sales in a highly saturated market, producers on GetMusic can upload their instrumentals to build a consistent stream of passive income. GetMusic distributes payouts from a global platform revenue pool, allowing producers to monetize their back-catalogs efficiently.

To boost user engagement and foster a strong creative community, GetMusic has integrated gamification elements. Producers can unlock unique digital producer cards, representing distinct signature sounds and styles, which can be used for community challenges and promotional events.

GetMusic.shop is a new subscription-based platform offering independent artists unlimited beat downloads for $29/month.

Following a successful pre-launch phase that generated significant traction and organic growth, GetMusic is aiming to build the ultimate global music ecosystem that spans distribution and creator services.
Independent artists and music producers can explore the catalog and register today by visiting GetMusic.shop.
