NASHVILLE, TN, UNITED STATES, August 17, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Before the Bible was a book on a shelf, it moved through the world in two forms: stories told aloud and songs sung together. Bible with Life, an independent Christian media platform, has built its entire ministry on those two vehicles, and the catalog behind that decision has quietly grown substantial.

> Scripture was carried for centuries by people telling its stories and singing its songs. We did not invent a method. We went back to one.”

> Benny Yu, Founder of Bible with Life

The platform's library now holds 45 cinematic retellings of Old and New Testament accounts, 63 original worship tracks across three albums, a daily Bible verse email, a 30-day prayer challenge, and a library of some 300 articles on Scripture and Christian living. All of it is free. Its newest line, personalized Scripture blessing songs, lets anyone turn a Bible verse and a loved one's name into a shareable song.

"Scripture was carried for centuries by people telling its stories and singing its songs," said Benny Yu, founder of Bible with Life. "We did not invent a method. We went back to one. The films are the story half. The music and the blessing songs are the song half. Everything we make fits on one of those two shelves."

The through-line, Yu said, is that both vehicles reach people a printed page does not. A family that would never assign itself a chapter of Jonah will watch the storm together. A teenager who skips the devotional will replay a song with their own name inside it.

The platform's work reaches viewers through biblewithlife.com and its YouTube channels, where its films and worship videos first found their audience. What began as a video channel has become a connected ecosystem: films that lead to music, music that leads to blessing songs, and a daily email that keeps Scripture arriving after the video ends.

"We measure ourselves on a narrow question," Yu added. "Did someone meet the actual text, not our opinions about it, in a form they could receive? Story and song are simply the two oldest answers to that question."

The full library can be explored at biblewithlife.com.
