For buyers and sellers navigating the Los Angeles luxury market, working with an experienced team that knows the local neighborhoods deeply can make a meaningful difference. The Valerie Fitzgerald Group covers a wide range of communities, including Beverly Hills, Bel Air, Brentwood, Westwood, Century City, Santa Monica, Pacific Palisades, Sunset Strip, West Hollywood, Venice, Marina del Rey, and Malibu. Each of these areas carries its own character, price range, and buyer profile, and the group's long presence in the market gives clients a grounded perspective on each one.

Valerie Fitzgerald serves as Founder and President of the group. Over more than two decades, she has represented distinguished properties throughout Los Angeles and has consistently ranked among Coldwell Banker's Top 10 agents nationwide. Her career sales total more than $3.5 billion, a figure that reflects the volume and caliber of transactions the group has handled over time. She is also the author of "Heart and Sold," a TEDx speaker, and the star of three seasons of HGTV's "Selling LA," giving the group a public profile that extends well beyond the real estate industry.

The group's core services cover both sides of a real estate transaction. For sellers, the team offers a structured approach to listing and marketing luxury properties, with resources designed to reach a wide audience of qualified buyers. Current featured listings include properties in Beverly Hills priced at $13,995,000, $17,500,000, $33,500,000, and $38,950,000, giving a clear picture of the price points the group regularly works within. For buyers, the group provides home search tools, buyer consultations, and access to neighborhood guides that outline what each community offers in terms of lifestyle, access, and property type.

Property management is also part of the group's service offerings, making it a resource for clients who own luxury real estate in Los Angeles and need ongoing support beyond the point of sale. This adds a layer of long-term value for clients who are not only buying or selling but also managing assets in one of the country's most active luxury markets.

One of the group's stated strengths is combining local knowledge with international reach. As a member of the Coldwell Banker Global Luxury program, the Valerie Fitzgerald Group connects clients with a worldwide network of buyers and agents. This matters in a market like Los Angeles, where luxury properties frequently attract interest from international buyers. The group's digital presence supports this reach as well. Their newsletter goes to more than 52,000 recipients, their combined Instagram and Facebook audience delivers more than 56,000 daily impressions, their LinkedIn network includes more than 27,000 connections, and their listings receive more than 6,500 weekly online views.

The group also runs a media and content operation that sets it apart from a typical real estate team. Valerie hosts a podcast called "Real Estate, Real Laughs" and created "Queen B: Grit. Grace. Reinvention.," a platform focused on leadership, entrepreneurship, and resilience. These projects expand the group's reach and keep clients and followers engaged with relevant content between transactions. The group also publishes market reports and neighborhood intelligence under a section called "Westside Intelligence," giving clients access to current data about the areas where they are buying or selling.

Beverly Hills remains central to the group's identity and activity. The neighborhood, known for its sprawling estates and hillside properties, represents the kind of high-end residential market the group has worked in for more than 20 years. Bel Air, another key area for the group, is described as an exclusive gated community rising into the foothills of the Santa Monica Mountains. Brentwood, also covered by the group, offers a mix of urban and gated residential settings that attract a diverse range of buyers. Each neighborhood has its own dynamic, and the group's neighborhood guides give clients a useful starting point when comparing options.
