Newpoint Advisors Corporation Reports 34:1 Return on Investment for Chief Restructuring Officer Engagements

Documented engagement outcomes show debt recovered at 34 times the cost of the engagement, showing value of right sized restructuring leadership.

BRENTWOOD, TN, UNITED STATES, September 15, 2026 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Newpoint Advisors Corporation announced that its Chief Restructuring Officer (CRO) engagements have delivered a documented return on investment of 34:1, reflecting the amount of debt recovered relative to the cost of the engagement. The figure is based on Newpoint's own engagement outcomes and highlights the financial impact of bringing in experienced, empowered restructuring leadership before a company's options narrow.

For companies in the $5 million to $50 million revenue range, financial distress often forces a difficult choice: continue managing internally with limited results, or move toward a bankruptcy filing and let the court determine the outcome. Newpoint Advisors Corporation offers a third path. Its CRO engagements place an interim executive with real decision-making authority inside the business, empowered to cut costs, renegotiate vendor and lender terms, restructure operations, and change the trajectory of the company, not simply report on it.

"A 34:1 return tells lenders and boards something they need to hear clearly: the cost of bringing in the right restructuring leadership is small compared to the cost of continued decline," said Kenneth R. Yager, President of Newpoint Advisors Corporation. "Lost customers, deteriorating vendor terms, and eroding lender confidence carry a real price. Our engagement data shows that the investment in a CRO consistently pays for itself many times over."

Newpoint Advisors Corporation structures its CRO engagements to be accessible to smaller companies, a segment often priced out by national restructuring firms that charge $80,000 to $500,000 or more per month. A right sized Newpoint engagement can run closer to $5,000 a week, plus modest travel and incidental costs, and typically lasts about six months. This model allows lenders and attorneys to bring in a qualified CRO earlier, while a company still has runway to change course, rather than waiting until a bankruptcy filing leaves fewer options and less cash on hand.

Newpoint Advisors Corporation encourages lenders, attorneys, and business owners evaluating a company in financial distress to consider a CRO engagement as a proactive step, not a last resort. The company's engagement outcomes, including the 34:1 return, are available for review by lenders and legal counsel assessing restructuring options for clients in the lower middle market.
