IT Governance increases availability of ISO27001 training courses in 2013

/EINPresswire.com/ IT Governance, the global leader in ISO27001 information, books, tools, training and consultancy has released its complete Training Course schedule for 2013. The schedule includes an unrivalled range of information security and IT governance training courses which lead to IBITGQ, EXIN, APMG, (ISC)2 and ISACA certified qualifications. Early booking discount of 15% applies to all courses booked in advance and a list of all training courses, most of which take place in London, is available at www.itgovernance.co.uk/training.aspx.

Alan Calder, CEO of IT Governance, says, "Following a very successful year for our ISO27001 information security training courses, we have decided to double the number of sittings to meet demand. The courses will be delivered monthly and we are delighted that places are already being booked, often a few months in advance."

Calder continues, "Compliance with the ISO27001 standard has become the minimum requirement for many organisations to be able to enter into contracts or gain competitive advantage. This demonstrates the need for professionally trained staff who have the skills to lead their employers through the certification process. In addition, certified training also helps delegates progress their career - another reason for the unprecedented demand for our information security and IT governance training courses."

IT Governance has been successfully running foundation and advanced level ISO27001 ISMS training courses for many years. Renowned for the quality of the materials and expertise of the trainers (see testimonials), these currently include:
