Ghost City Tours launches in Greenwich Village, offering a new way to explore one of Manhattan's most storied neighborhoods after dark

New York

NEW YORK, NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, September 7, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Ghost City Tours, the world's leading haunted tourism companies, has officially launched in New York City, bringing its signature blend of researched history, storytelling and paranormal intrigue to Greenwich Village.

The company's new Greenwich Village tours invite locals and visitors to look beyond the neighborhood's tree-lined streets and iconic landmarks and uncover the darker stories woven into its history. Tours begin at Washington Square Park, a location built atop a forgotten potter's field, and explore stories connected to Edgar Allan Poe, the park's centuries-old hanging elm, the 1911 Triangle Shirtwaist fire and the infamous West 10th Street "House of Death."

"New York is one of the most fascinating cities in the world when it comes to haunted history," said Tim Nealon, founder and CEO of Ghost City Tours. "There are stories everywhere, but Greenwich Village is especially compelling because so much of its history is still visible in the streets, buildings and landmarks people walk past every day. We're excited to bring our approach to storytelling to New York and give people a completely different way to experience the city."

Ghost City's new Whispers of the Village Ghost Tour is a 90-minute, all-ages evening walk through Greenwich Village that weaves together the neighborhood's fascinating history and ghost stories. The experience begins at Washington Square Park, where a forgotten potter's field lies beneath the iconic lawn, and takes guests through the streets where Edgar Allan Poe lived and wrote. Along the way, guides explore the park's centuries-old hanging elm and the stories of the people and events that continue to shape the Village's haunted reputation. Designed for all ages, the tour focuses on authentic storytelling without gore or jump scares.

For those looking for a darker experience, The Wicked Village Tour takes guests into Greenwich Village after dark for a 90-minute, adults-only exploration of some of the neighborhood's most tragic and unsettling history. The tour visits the site of the 1911 Triangle Shirtwaist fire, the West 10th Street townhouse known as the "House of Death," and the old potter's field beneath Washington Square. Rather than relying on sensationalism, the experience presents these stories candidly, focusing on the real people, grief and history behind the legends.

Founded in 2012, Ghost City Tours has grown into a national haunted tourism company operating in more than 60 cities across the United States. Its New York launch expands the company's footprint into one of the world's most iconic destinations and adds Greenwich Village to its growing collection of historic locations explored through the lens of the unexplained.

MEDIA INTERVIEWS & INCLUSION: Tim Nealon is available for interviews regarding the New York City launch, the growth of haunted tourism, what makes New York uniquely haunted, the history behind Greenwich Village's most notorious locations, and the business of building a national ghost-tour company. Media outlets and creators interested in covering the launch or experiencing a Greenwich Village tour are invited to reach out for interview opportunities, tour access and inclusion consideration.
