

Smokers Celebrate the New Year By Switching to E-Cigs

/EINPresswire.com/ Smokers can keep their New Year's resolution to avoid tobacco while still enjoying the nicotine they crave.

As 2012 comes to a close, many Americans are putting together a list of New Year's Resolutions. It's not surprising that giving up cigarettes is among the top 10 resolutions for 2013. Smokers have notoriously chosen January 1 as a "quit day," looking for alternatives to tobacco cigarettes to help them beat nicotine cravings and give up the unhealthy habit once and for all. This year, many smokers are choosing electronic cigarettes as a better alternative to tobacco.

Electronic cigarettes are battery-operated devices that look similar to analog cigarettes, but contain no tobacco. Unlike regular cigarettes, e-cigs do not release any smoke. Instead, the user inhales a water-based vapor that contains nicotine. This satisfies the nicotine craving while eliminating the dangerous chemicals and toxins in cigarette smoke. E-cigs also offer the advantage of being odor-free. There is no second hand smoke to put others in danger so e-cigs can be used in most public places.

ElectronicCigarettesReviews.net is offering smokers some amazing savings when they decide to try e-cigs for the New Year. The website has been the most reliable source of e-cig reviews for several years, but now they are also offering coupon codes that translate into hundreds in savings for smokers.

Among the many sales from e-cig manufacturers, readers at ECR can get additional savings of up to 30% in celebration of New Years. Popular products like the V2 Cigs starter kits are at rock bottom prices with these additional savings.

For smokers who want to give up tobacco, e-cigarettes are an excellent alternative. Curious smokers can browse top e-cig brands at ElectronicCigarettesReviews.net and check out the brand new blog series detailing a step-by-step guide to making the switch from tobacco cigarettes to e-cigs.
