

Become A Guest Blogger And Help Others Learn How To Join The Military With USMilitary.com

/EINPresswire.com/ USMilitary.com is looking for contributing authors and guest bloggers. These bloggers can help potential recruits with reasons to join the military and military entrance requirements, while being paid for their expertise.

USMilitary.com, a website devoted to helping potential soldiers, sailors, Airmen and Marines learn how to join the military, is looking for a few good men and women.

The website currently has positions open for contributing authors and guest bloggers. Authors should be comfortable writing about matters that relate to one of the branches in the U.S. military, such as military entrance requirements and reasons to join the military.

To apply, guest bloggers should prepare two sample posts. Each should be no longer than 1000 words and the piece should be both informative and interactive.

"If you have experience with the U.S. military, we want to hear from you. Our bloggers are professional writers who have first-hand experience with one of the branches of the military. If you want to share your knowledge about your favorite military branch, we'd love to have you join our team," said Larry Fowler of USMilitary.com (<http://www.usmilitary.com/>).

USMilitary.com targets young Americans or anyone else interested in joining the U.S. military. The site focuses on helping potential recruits find the right branch, as well as teach them about the different types of military jobs that are available in the Air Force, the Army, the Navy, the Coast Guard and the Marine Corps.

"We receive more than 750,000 impressions a month, so if you're a blogger who wants your
