2026 “100 Women of Excellence” honoree Dr. Jacqueline Mohair

GA, UNITED STATES, September 14, 2026 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Ambassador Dr. Jacqueline Mohair, a Georgia-based educational consultant, humanitarian and technology entrepreneur, has been selected as a 2026 “100 Women of Excellence” honoree.

Mohair will be formally recognized Friday, Sept. 18, during a ceremony at the Dirksen Senate Office Building on Capitol Hill in Washington, D.C. The program begins at 1:30 p.m. in Room SD-G50 and is free and open to the public.

The honor is presented by the 100 Women of Excellence Committee, in partnership with the Honorable Erica Thomas-Adeyemi. According to the committee, Mohair was selected for her leadership, service, community impact and commitment to excellence.

“To be recognized among 100 accomplished women from across the country is both humbling and deeply meaningful,” Mohair said. “I view this honor not only as a celebration of my journey, but also as a reflection of the students, families, entrepreneurs and community leaders I have had the privilege of serving.”

Known professionally as “The Bridge Builder,” Mohair has built a career centered on education, leadership development, entrepreneurship and community service. She is the founder and chancellor of Trinity International University of Ambassadors, founder of Trinity Girls Network and founder of the Influence Authority™ App.

Dr. Mohair is also the founder of the Influence Authority™ App, an innovative technology platform that will officially be released on October 15, 2026. The platform is designed to help entrepreneurs, nonprofit leaders, educators, authors, speakers and coaches strengthen their organizations, increase their visibility and access valuable resources related to funding, education, media and business development..

"My work has always been about helping people move from vision to action," Mohair said. "Whether I am supporting a student, advising an organization or developing technology, my goal is to help people gain the knowledge, resources and confidence they need to build something that lasts."

Throughout her career, Mohair has worked with educational institutions, nonprofit organizations, faith leaders, business owners and emerging entrepreneurs. Her initiatives have focused on leadership training, organizational development, education, technology, funding access and the advancement of women and girls.

The recognition ceremony is part of the 100 Women of Excellence Brunch experience, a premier celebration taking place during Congressional Black Caucus Weekend in Washington, D.C. The event honors 100 extraordinary women for their leadership, professional achievements, community service and impact.

Following the recognition ceremony and official group photograph at the United States Capitol, honorees and guests will gather at the Royal Sonesta Hotel Washington DC for an elegant afternoon of brunch, networking, inspiration and celebration. The event was created to recognize women who are leading, serving and producing meaningful change in their communities and beyond.

The separately ticketed brunch will feature Judge Penny Brown Reynolds, along with other distinguished guests and inspiring leaders. Guests are not required to purchase a brunch ticket to attend the recognition ceremony or witness the honorees being recognized.

Mohair said the honor has strengthened her commitment to creating pathways for future leaders.

“I am grateful to the 100 Women of Excellence Committee and the Honorable Erica Thomas-Adeyemi for this recognition,” Mohair said. “I accept it with a renewed responsibility to continue opening doors, connecting people with opportunities and helping the next generation of women lead with courage and purpose.”
