GAINESVILLE, VA -- Mold remediation and MD & VA mold removal provider, Mold Aid, unveiled a brand new website detailing personal accounts of individuals affected by hazardous mold, and the various measures taken by Mold Aid to assist them.

The site, www.moldaidreview.com, features candid reviews of the Virginia-based business, submitted by clients whom the company has aided with a host of mold related services including remediation, structural drying, water damage repair and air quality assurance.

"We've built our business on customer satisfaction and take great pride in the work we do. Mold can be a very dangerous hazard and we don't take the health and well-being of the individuals we assist lightly. This new website will give potential clients an idea of the quality of service they can expect from Mold Aid and personal accounts of our process, unfiltered and unedited, directly from past customers," said John Taylor, owner of Mold Aid National, Inc. (<http://www.moldaid.com>).

Each story is accompanied by the customer name and the location where the work was done. In addition to reviews of Mold Aid, the site also lists the services that Mold Aid provides and the many certifications that its technicians hold.

Mold Aid has been helping families and businesses in MD and VA for over a decade with mold testing, removal and damage repair. The company stresses the importance that if mold prevention fails, then immediate action should be taken to contain and remove any spore growth.

"It's vital to address potential mold issues as soon as a problem is suspected to avoid additional structural damage and deteriorating air quality. It's our hope that by reading what past clients have to say about Mold Aid on our new review site, individuals who may require our services will be confident in addressing the situation with us as soon as possible so that we can get them back into a safe environment quickly," said Taylor.

With some of the most highly certified technicians in the industry, Mold Aid can provide whole home or business thermal imaging inspections to identify potential problems and recommend corrective actions, which can return families or businesses to a mold-free environment in a matter of days.
