AS AUDIENCES EMBRACE REFLECTIVE, CHARACTER-DRIVEN INDIE FILMS, ‘ROAD TO EVERYWHERE’ HEADS TO VOD

‘Road to Everywhere’ hits VOD Sept. 15 after a 22-city theatrical run and 96% audience score, reuniting key ‘Driven’ cast nearly 30 years later.

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, September 14, 2026 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Michael Shoob’s new feature reunites the cast of ‘Driven’ nearly 30 years later and features Whip Hubley, Robert Mirabal, and Daniel Roebuck

At a moment when audiences are gravitating toward emotionally resonant stories about legacy, identity, and human connection, ‘Road to Everywhere’ arrives on major VOD platforms September 15, 2026, bringing with it a powerful cinematic reunion nearly three decades in the making.

The VOD debut follows a summer theatrical run that brought ‘Road to Everywhere’ to 26 theaters in 22 cities across the country, including Los Angeles, New York City, Chicago, Houston, Seattle, Atlanta, Santa Fe, and Albuquerque. The film has also earned a 96% Popcornmeter audience score on Rotten Tomatoes, reflecting strong audience response as it moves from theaters to home viewing.

In ‘Road to Everywhere,’ Los Angeles cab driver Jason Schuyler is offered the trip of a lifetime by Jake, a casino dealer and gambler seeking to return to the Navajo Nation after 30 years away. Jake dreams of seeing his grandson compete in a Native rodeo, but the journey becomes far deeper: a moving reckoning with family, memory, forgiveness, and what truly matters in the time we have left.

Whip Hubley & Robert Mirabal Star in 'Road to Everywhere'

What makes ‘Road to Everywhere’ especially compelling is its extraordinary connection to ‘Driven,’ the 1996 film that premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival and introduced Whip Hubley’s unforgettable everyman cab driver, Jason Schuyler. In this new film, key cast members return to their roles almost 30 years later, lending the story a rare emotional authenticity as both actors and characters carry the weight of real time onscreen. More than a road movie, ‘Road to Everywhere’ becomes a reflection on aging, unfinished dreams, reconciliation, and the enduring search for meaning.

Whip Hubley leads the film, known to audiences for ‘Top Gun,’ reprising Jason Schuyler with lived-in gravitas and emotional depth. He stars opposite Robert Mirabal, the two-time Grammy-winning Taos Pueblo musician and actor, whose powerful performance gives the film spiritual weight and cultural authenticity. Veteran actor Daniel Roebuck, whose extensive screen credits include ‘The Fugitive’ and ‘Final Destination,’ adds a familiar face to the ensemble. The cast also includes DezBaa', known to audiences for AMC’s ‘Dark Winds,’ along with Coby Larinde, Diane DiLascio, Rawle D. Lewis, and Googy Gress, creating an ensemble that bridges past and present with warmth, texture, and emotional immediacy.

Michael Shoob, a major creative force behind the film, wrote and directed ‘Road to Everywhere,’ building the feature as a deeply personal continuation of the world first introduced in ‘Driven.’ Produced by longtime collaborator Joseph Mealey, the Director of Photography on ‘Driven,’ the film uses the passage of nearly three decades as its emotional engine, resulting in a work that feels both intimate and expansive. Together, Shoob and Mealey have crafted a story rooted in redemption, cultural reconnection, and the ties that bind generations across time and distance.

Critical response has also praised the film’s emotional depth and visual storytelling, with NYC Movie Guru calling ‘Road to Everywhere’ “a profound, honest, engrossing, and beautifully shot emotional journey well worth taking.”

“DeskPop Entertainment is proud to bring ‘Road to Everywhere’ to audiences nationwide at a time when viewers are actively seeking films with emotional authenticity, cultural specificity, and lasting human resonance,” said Steve Bulzoni, President of the Twin Engines Label Group. “Michael Shoob has created a moving and beautifully acted film that reconnects audiences with these characters in a way that feels both intimate and cinematic. It is a story of homecoming, healing, and reflection that stays with you."

'Road to Everywhere' arrives on major VOD platforms September 15, 2026.
