CEDAR RAPIDS, IA, UNITED STATES, September 17, 2026 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Radix Recovery, the addiction and dual diagnosis treatment center housed in the historic Higley Mansion, announced today that its program is expanding to serve individuals and families across the entire state of Iowa. Since opening, Radix Recovery has served more than 500 families, and clients now travel from every region of the state to receive care at its 68-bed Cedar Rapids campus.

> Iowans have had to leave the state for this kind of care for too long. Now they can find it at home, with a full continuum of treatment and a recovery community that stays with them after discharge."

The expansion responds to statewide demand for a level of care that, according to the people who have gone through the program, has not existed in Iowa before. Client reviews and admissions inquiries consistently describe Radix Recovery as one of the strongest rehab programs available, and requests for admission now come from communities well beyond Cedar Rapids, including Iowa City, Des Moines, Davenport, Waterloo, Dubuque, Sioux City, and rural counties in every corner of the state.

Radix Recovery offers a full continuum of care under one roof, so a client never has to leave the program to move to the next stage of recovery. Services include medically supervised detox, inpatient residential treatment, a partial hospitalization program (PHP), an intensive outpatient program (IOP), and ongoing relapse prevention and continuing care. Every level of care integrates evidence-based therapy, dual diagnosis mental health treatment, spiritual development, and a recovery community that clients remain connected to long after formal treatment ends.

"Radix Recovery exists to alleviate the pain and suffering caused by addiction both for those who are experiencing addiction and those who love them," said Dr. Jacob Christenson, Chief Executive Officer and founding partner of Radix Recovery. "We do this by delivering compassionate, evidence-based care, facilitating spiritual development, and creating an environment where clients can connect with a recovery community."

Dr. Courtney Brennaman, licensed psychologist and founder of Radix Recovery, built the center after watching her own father enter treatment and change his life when she was a child. "I believe that surrounding yourself with quality people, programming, and community can have a positive, ever-lasting impact on people's lives, and that is the goal for Radix Recovery," Brennaman said. "Iowans have had to leave the state for this kind of care for too long. Now they can find it at home."

Radix Recovery is in-network with most Iowa insurance plans, and the admissions team verifies coverage and coordinates travel for clients coming from outside the Cedar Rapids area. The center is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and admissions are typically completed within days of the first call.

To make care easier to find for families statewide, Radix Recovery has published dedicated resources for the communities it serves, including drug rehab in Iowa City and drug rehab in Des Moines . Additional community pages are available at.

Looking ahead, Radix Recovery plans to add long-term residential treatment and sober living locations in 2027, extending the continuum of care so clients can move from detox through independent, supported living without ever leaving the Radix community.
