Indiana Flow, a licensed and insured, family-owned residential plumbing company, has formally confirmed active service coverage across six additional Indianapolis-area communities, Carmel, Fishers, Westfield, Noblesville, Zionsville, and McCordsville, alongside its established base in Indianapolis, effective immediately. The update gives homeowners across the metro clear confirmation of full-service plumbing support from a single licensed, insured provider, backed by transparent upfront pricing.

Indiana Flow is owned and operated by brothers Ahmad and Omar Saltagi and holds Indiana plumbing license PC12000053. The company offers a Good, Better, Best instant online quoting tool, so homeowners see transparent pricing before any work begins, and every completed job carries a 1-year labor warranty.

"We've been running calls out to Carmel, Fishers, and the rest of these communities for a while now, we just wanted the paperwork to catch up to what our trucks are already doing," said Ahmad Saltagi, co-owner of Indiana Flow. "No matter which of these six areas you're calling from, you get the same upfront price and the same warranty."

Homeowners across all six newly confirmed communities receive the same licensed technicians, the same Good/Better/Best pricing tool, and the same 1-year labor warranty Indiana Flow is known for in Indianapolis, with no distinction in service quality or pricing between its original service area and the newly confirmed communities.
