

One in Three Elderly Have Dementia at Death, New Report Finds

/EINPresswire.com/ March 19, 2013 /EIN News/--A new report by the Alzheimer's Association finds that one of every three elderly patients have Alzheimer's or some other form of dementia when they die, even if that dementia is not the direct cause of death. The report forecasts that the cost of dealing with dementia in the elderly will soar unless treatments are found.

EIN News, a leading media monitoring company, provides in-depth news about dementia issues and other news related to elderly health via the following news sections:
