BluePay Partners With CDI Technology To Integrate Its Payment Processing Platform Into ERP Systems

/EINPresswire.com/ Leading payments solution provider BluePay is collaborating with CDI to integrate its secure payment processing platform into ERP systems.

Credit card processing company BluePay recently teamed up with multichannel commerce solutions provider CDI Technology Corp. (CDI) to integrate its secure payment processing platform into enterprise resource planning (ERP) systems such as SAP and Oracle/JD Edwards. Through the new partnership, BluePay's simple, hosted payment forms and mobile solutions will reduce Payment Card Industry (PCI) scope for all businesses that implement the platform.

"BluePay has always been passionate about offering high levels of service and security to a wide range of merchants and industries," said John Rante, CEO of BluePay. "Now we're well equipped to offer integrated payment processing to enterprise-level companies, while also reducing PCI scope and feeds."

Already in place, the new collaboration has fully integrated CDI's ERP2Web and SnapPay products with the BluePay payment platform. Not only does this give BluePay more opportunities to serve enterprise clients, but it also gives CDI a secure, hosted payment solution to reduce PCI scope for its existing enterprise-level clients. The partnership now provides those clients with integrated payment processing solutions for large ERP software.

"We are thrilled to have found another way to serve our enterprise clients," said Suhas Gosavi, President of CDI. "BluePay has a strong reputation as a secure payment processor complying with PCI DSS standards, so teaming up with its platform means we now offer our clients the highest standards of payment security."
