The 24-hour Parables TV Christian movies network has been keeping an eye for some time on Wicker's Christian Movie Connect. "We've been looking for short segments like this for filler content," said Isaac Hernandez, Parable TV's General Manager. "I expect our audience to find CMC's segment informative and entertaining."

Meanwhile, Jared Geesey, Sr. Vice President of ChristianCinema.com has decided to tap Wicker's CMC content to keep their readers informed about the latest Christian news. "Cheryl has been very visible in Christian film festivals, conventions and events. We are excited about adding the perspective she brings to the news we provide to Christian film fans," says Geesey.

Christian Press' Russ Jones also acquired CMC's content during the NRB convention. ChristianPress.com is an award-winning, nondenominational Christian website providing news and information from a biblical worldview.

"I think of myself as a Christian film advocate. It is something I am passionate about, whether I'm playing the role of producer, publicist or media personality. Interviewing people is a way I can help to promote films in the faith-based genre while doing something I love to do at the same time," exclaimed Wicker, who also owns Premier1 Studios, an entertainment media and public relations agency specializing in Christian media. "I am very excited to see these interviews get out to a larger audience."

Aside from the podcasts on her ChristianMovieConnect.com website, Cheryl also posts articles for Examiner.com as the National Christian Movie Examiner, which will also be picked up by ChristianCinema.com and ChristianPress.com.
