

Trade Show Exhibit Company, Skyline Displays Of New York Sponsors Just Like Me Project

/EINPresswire.com/ HAUPPAUGE, NY -- The statistics are startling -- 46 percent of all high school students are currently using some sort of addictive substance. What's even more frightening is that one third of these students meets the medical criteria for addiction.

To help fight this epidemic, Skyline Displays of New York, a company that can help businesses design a dynamic trade show display in New York, recently designed an exhibit to the Just Like Me project. The Just Like Me project is a peer-to-peer drug prevention program in Long Island and works to empower teenagers to make healthy decisions.

Skyline New York's exhibit depicted a dilapidated building. Students who entered the exhibit find a photo of a young addict, while a recording shares the addict's experience with drug addiction. The photo is seen through a two way mirror, which helps the teen see both the addict and themselves at the same time. The display highlights the devastation and despair felt by many addicts.

"We want to do our part to help stop the cycle of addiction by empowering kids to make better decisions. We are honored to contribute to the Just Like Me project and hope that it's effects are seen throughout the local community" said Robert Watson, President of Skyline New York.

In addition to the sponsorship contribution, Skyline New York is currently running a promotion to contribute a percentage of its sales, referenced to the promotion, between now and the next Just Like Me fundraiser scheduled in Huntington, NY on June 10, 2013.

Skyline Displays of New York is a part of the larger, global Skyline network, which employs more than 1500 people throughout the world. This network helps ensure that customers receive one of a kind New York trade show stands that can deliver a targeting marketing message, no matter what industry they're in.

In addition to designing and selling exhibits, the company can also provide trade show exhibit rental in New York. This helps ensure that all customers -- regardless of their budget -- can afford an eye-catching exhibit.

"Whether you're a large company that wants to make a major statement in your industry, or you're a smaller community organization like the Just Like Me project, we can help you design a dynamic display that gets noticed," said Watson
