Learning the Ropes to Becoming an Expert

Web designing is offered to those experienced web designers who are looking for way to improve their current state of their web site or to create new web sites with usability and accessibility in mind. The most basic course offered is web accessibility where users will learn how to interpret the confusing language of the section 508 requirements. Next, Develop Intelligence offers the introduction to web usability, which is an intermediate skill level. All courses available are hands on learning techniques as well as customized and role-based focused.

The Importance of Usability and Accessibility

With all the developing technology, web designers are introduced to every day, it is vital that web and desktop applications be accessible to everyone. Also, section 508 is a legal accessibility that is difficult for everyone to understand and interpret, but it is just as equally important that web developers comply with the stated guidelines. Usability and Accessibility of a web site should be available to everyone including those with disabilities. Users may have an exceptional web site layout, but if the usability and accessibility is lacking and not fully being implemented the look and design of the web site will not be of importance.

DevelopIntelligence provides users with hands on techniques that are dedicated, customized to users, and role-based. They give web designers commonly used tools to implement and test web accessibility as well as usability of technical teams and organizations' web sites. During training courses DevelopIntelligence instructors provide in-depth examination of the philosophy, psychology, and tactics required to create usable and accessible web sites.
