

Chicago Wins the Triple Crown, EquityBuild News

EquityBuild News, real estate investing in Chicago.

NAPLES, FLORIDA, June 12, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In the last two weeks, the rebound for Chicago was the cover story for Time magazine, the New York Times magazine, and a significant portion of the cover article for the Life & Arts Section of the Financial Times.

As detailed in an article on www.equitybuildnews.com, the Time magazine article, "Chicago Bull" by Kari Linderson, was about the fine job Mayor Raham Emanuel is doing in revitalizing Chicago. His efforts have lured more than 20 new companies to The Second City. In addition, he is teaming up with Microsoft, Cisco and IBM to create a high tech curriculum for Chicago schools.

The New York Times magazine article, "The Death and Life of Chicago," by Ben Austen focused on the efforts of neighborhood groups in Chicago to revitalize their areas. While the real estate market was hit hard in Chicago, the work of its proud residents is bringing whole areas back. "These were citizens who fought back against what The Great Recession did to their blocks," noted Jerry Cohen, President and Founder of EquityBuild, a real estate investment firm. "And it is showing by how the city is coming back strong," furthered Cohen, who was just honored with the prestigious "Moving America Forward" award for his community service efforts.

Covering almost three full pages, the Financial Times article, "Rebirth of the US City," detailed how the great American cities of Chicago, Los Angeles, and others now have an "energy" and ambition- that was missing a few years ago." Edward Luce, the author, sees this happening across America, noting that, "From the baking sunbelt to the rain-kissed northeast, an urban revival is spreading across America."

"The surging real estate market is showing how Chicago is being revitalized," declared Cohen, who has been a principal in more than 2000 transactions since 1984. "It is a great city with world class architecture, universities, culture, and entertainment. There is no gamble when investing in the future of Chicago: it is a sure bet!"

The articles this month from Time, The New York Times, and the Financial Times are proof.
