CUMMING, GA, June 17, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As summer heats up, so does the war on mosquitoes. Lanier Exterminating Service in Cumming, Georgia can help keep these annoying and potentially dangerous pests away from your property.

Every summer means the returning presence of mosquitoes. But indications are that this year's crop of mosquitoes will be worse than before. In Florida, extra-large breeds of mosquito are being spotted, with reports saying they are 20 times the size of a normal mosquito. Minnesota residents are being warned to be extra careful due to the increased presence of mosquitoes and ticks across the state.

In addition to being irritating and annoying, mosquitoes can also be dangerous. They can carry and spread diseases, like West Nile virus, dengue fever, and malaria. Though the chance of catching these diseases may be minimal, they can be dangerous and even life threatening. Being proactive and taking steps to prevent exposure to mosquitoes is a good idea. One simple way to do this is to have a professional pest control company come in to perform mosquito control treatments.

During a mosquito control treatment, the bushes and shrubs surrounding a home or business are sprayed to kill adult mosquitoes and destroy eggs and larvae before they hatch. Each adult mosquito is capable of laying hundreds of eggs, which can be dormant for many years before hatching. This is why multiple treatments may be required to kill them all.
