FORT LAUDERDALE, FL, June 18, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Florida drivers now have a place to turn when their driver's license is expired or suspended, due to paperwork glitches or issue with paying child support. Fort Lauderdale attorney Guy Seligman has three decades of experience helping clients work with the DMV to sort out the myriad circumstances that can lead to a driver's license suspension.

An expired license can be for a variety of simple reasons, however, in the state of Florida it is against the law to drive a motor vehicle while possessing an expired license. "Drivers who are pulled over for a traffic stop with an expired license will receive a citation that carries two points charged to their driving records," explains Guy. "This can lead to an increase in insurance more trouble down the road."

An invalid license is defined as a driver's license that has been invalidated due to suspension or revocation for a DUI charge, controlled substance conviction, child support enforcement, unpaid tickets or too many points on your license. "Driving with an invalid or expired license has serious consequences in the state of Florida," said Guy.

If a person is paying court-ordered child support and falls behind in payments, the Florida Department of Revenue (FDR) can suspend his or hers driver's license. The suspension can be lifted with payment of the support, and the State can authorize partial payments and increased monthly payments. "I can help you find the best approach to getting your license back if you owe child support," explains Guy. "Possible remedies include negotiating a payment plan and determining if you actually are financially capable of paying the amount owed."

Seligman suggests that anyone at risk of losing their license, or those with already suspended or expired licenses contact his new hot line at: 954/760-7600 covering Miami, Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, Orlando, Jacksonville, Tampa, and all of Florida.
