

Actual Multiple Monitors has been Greenlit on Steam

Actual Multiple Monitors by Actual Tools was picked by Steam Greenlight project for online distribution through the Steam network.

VANCOUVER, July 4, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Some works are much easier done on a multi-monitor system. For a designer, a photographer or a publisher having a system with two or more displays is a standard. However, the entire working experience on the multi-monitor system is different from that on a conventional single-display PC. Indeed, while the desktop gets wider, the space between physical monitors destroys the consistency of the virtual desktop, making it less intuitive and harder to operate with.

Actual Multiple Monitors adds several useful options to fix some counter-intuitive features of the desktop on multiple monitor systems. Multi-monitor taskbar, desktop wrapping, mouse locking, faster cycling through monitors with mouse and keyboard shortcuts - these are just the top options available in program. Custom hotkeys, windows snapping, additional title bar buttons allow for easier window control, while multi-monitor wallpapers and screensavers and a special desktop mirroring function that creates a copy of a monitor in a separate window shown on another monitor help a user to get the most from his desktop space, both for work and for entertainment.

And now Actual Multiple Monitors is available through the Steam network. On June 28, Steam Greenlight has chosen several games and software titles and has given them to go ahead.

"Steam Greenlight is a community driven platform, and we are glad to see how many people all over the world have voted for Actual Multiple Monitors", says Michael Tretyakov, the CEO at Actual Tools.
