

Johannesburg gains the largest share of growth across Africa covered under British Airways - TravelHouseUK

Flights to Johannesburg will now be tallying to a total 17 flights per week, listed at the top of multiple African destinations adding on flights this season

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, July 10, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Evolving to support airline booking under the modern Internet age, TravelhouseUK highlights the lowest airfares for reaching destinations worldwide for its clients based in the UK. News24 has revealed that British Airways has increased its weekly flight operations in Johannesburg within this summer season.

Increased flight operations at such a short notice would mean that the airline is involved in the effort to attend to the additional load of passengers, allowing more travelers to avail travel offers within their required schedules.

Clients would also find it convenient to book for Johannesburg in order to reach Africa, since Johannesburg is considered a regional hub towards Southern Africa.

TravelhouseUK has held a role of a wider-ranging analysis of evaluating options of air travel when it comes to choosing the airline for a particular flight. Sharing a client market in the same country, the agency has built a strong partnership with British Airways. Flights to Sydney, Laos, Bloemfontein, New York and Dubai are operated under the airline, which can be booked with the agency at bargain offers of every season.

The flights have been increased with a frequency of three times per week, bringing the total weekly number of flights to 17 from London. Flights to Johannesburg are already twice daily, followed on by Cape Town which will also now be attending to double daily flights from London. Other African destinations listed with increased operations are Monrovia, Freetown, Marrakech and Tripoli.

Headquartered at London's Heathrow Airport, British Airways remains one of the most prominent operators in international aviation. The flag carrier of the UK is the founder of Oneworld alliance, and is transitioning towards the latest generation of fleet inductions consisting of Boeing 787 Dreamliner as well as Airbus A380 aircraft. It has maintained a special focus for its passenger segments travelling to Africa, increasing flights to main destinations with the highest frequencies on a relatively global scale.

"These latest additions are in fact triggered under the influence of the peak demand of mid-summer season" said Victor Hunt, the operations manager at TravelhouseUK. "Such large scale and immediate responses are only possible under large global airlines like British Airways. On the plus side, the reliability of serving between UK and the entire Africa means that an expected increase in bookings is banking upon the reputation factor of the airline itself."
