ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, July 12, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Elite Pro Systems offers free on-site consultations to churches, institutions and businesses for professional video and sound systems in St. Louis, Missouri, Belleville, Illinois, and many of the surrounding communities.

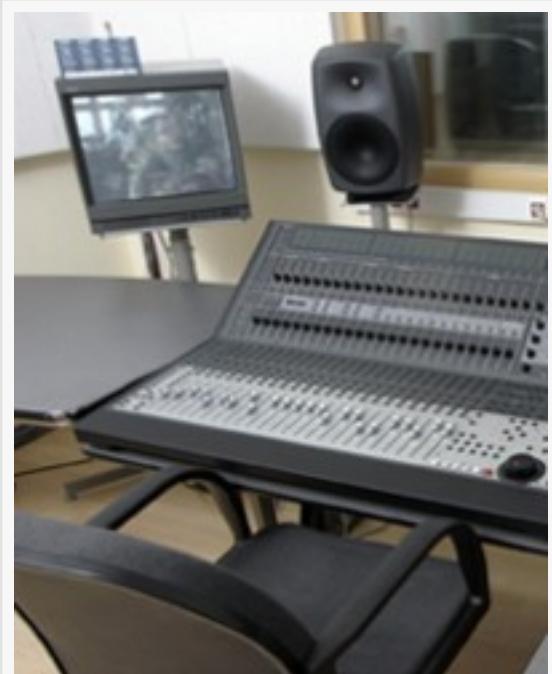

Elite Pro Systems is now offering free on-site consultations for organizations, churches, and businesses in the St. Louis area. Elite Pro Systems provides advanced measurement and computer simulation as it designs sound systems for critical applications such as gymnasiums, theaters and sports stadiums. The firm is offering free on-site consultations to help consumers solve their sound or video needs.

Elite Pro Systems understands that room acoustics are the key factor in designing any sound system and they excel in this area. They also understand the importance of reliability and ease-of-use when designing and implementing any solution for use in a school, church or business environment.

Whether their clients need video surveillance for school security, a classroom presentation system or a new sound system for the gymnasium, stadium or theater, they will always provide a free on-site consultation.

"We have been servicing customers for more than 25 years with the utmost in sound and video quality. We believe that professionally designed audio-visual or sound systems in St. Louis can make a real difference in our customer's day-to-day operations," said a company spokesperson.

The company's service does not stop once the system is installed. All of the Elite Pro Systems are properly commissioned and debugged. The company spends the necessary time during the design stage and at the critical final stage to ensure the sound and/or video quality are the best. This includes final sound system adjustments to voicing, video system calibration, control system
