

Angie's Appliance Repair Advises Fort Lauderdale and Broward County Residents: Beware Scam Repairmen

Company with 40 Years of Experience in Fort Lauderdale Appliance Repair Urges Those Who Need Appliance Repair to Trust a Reliable Name.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FL, July 15, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- There is no shortage of grifters in today's world, as evidenced by a recent disturbing tale of a fraudulent appliance repair service.

"This scam is perpetrated by a man who has advertised himself as an appliance repair business. He created websites, which two people had contacted about coming to their home and possibly repairing a household appliance. In one case the request was made to repair a washer, and in the other case, the victim needed a refrigerator repaired, the report states." - Amber Nast

In either case, regrettably, the outcome was the same.

"In both cases, the man came to the victim's home, looked at the appliance and told the victims that he needed to order a part to perform the repair. The victims in both cases wrote the man a check, and were told that he would obtain the part and return to repair their appliance. However, officers say he never returned to either victim's home. After investigating, officials learned that he would cash the check at a bank the very next day." - Amber Nast

In today's world, how can we be sure that the services for which we contract are the services we will get? A good rule of thumb: trust a company with a documented history of quality service.
