

Vaginal Mesh Helpline Launches National Campaign To Locate All Women With An AMS and Boston Scientific Mesh

Vaginal Mesh Helpline Locates All Women With a Boston Scientific and AMS Vaginal Mesh in All States To Help Them file Their Vaginal Mesh lawsuit

BOCA RATON FLORIDA, July 18, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Vaginal Mesh Helpline has launched a national outreach campaign to locate all women with an AMS or Boston Scientific vaginal mesh. According to the helpline, "Many states reached the 2 year statute of limitations cut off date as of July 13th but, because Boston Scientific and AMS have their home offices in Massachusetts and Minnesota we can still help them file lawsuits." "The vaginal mesh lawyers may be able to move the vaginal mesh lawsuits to the state of the manufacturer and then file the lawsuit at the state level."

The Vaginal Mesh Helpline has been a source and resource for women with mesh complications. "We are very concerned about women suffering with the vaginal mesh." "Our goal is to connect as many women as we can with vaginal mesh lawyers." The Vaginal Mesh Helpline is helping women file vaginal mesh lawsuits for all manufacturers in:

Arkansas, D.C, Florida, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming. "These states have 3, 4 and 5 year statute of limitations and are still good states".

"Many states statute of limitation for filing vaginal mesh lawsuits against the various manufacturers of the vaginal mesh are two years from the date of the FDA's vaginal mesh warning. July 13th sadly marked the end of that statute of limitations.

We asked if there are any other options for women and were told "Many of our vaginal mesh lawyers are still taking 2 year states just in case something new unfolds as the discovery process continues". For more information about vaginal mesh lawsuits contact the Vaginal Mesh Helpline 1 877 522-2123
