Plum Heating and Cooling Takes on Summer Season with Increased Hiring

POINT COOK, VIC, AUSTRALIA, August 10, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Plum Heating and Cooling is enhancing its employee base keeping in mind the summer demand. Not only is the demand for air conditioner installation expected to pick up, but also the need for a variety of product servicing queries. The new crew is expected to match this need.

Plum Heating and Cooling does not have an idle moment this summer. As the searing summer hits the coast of Australia, the demand for air conditioning installation and regular servicing is expected to push the company's team of highly trained technicians into constant action every day.

Currently, Plum Heating and Cooling is responsible for the service and maintenance of over thirty air conditioners, on an everyday basis - and this is just the Western clientele.

With anticipated summer's soaring highs to cross 40 degree during day time, Plum's plan is a necessary move to in guaranteeing AC availability throughout the summer. As a result, the company is preparing to meet its unmatched service standards by hiring new staff. This will ensure service standards do not get compromised. From a business point of view, it enables Plum to retain its hard earned success and reputation in the market.

Kyle Briggs, founder and Director of Plum Heating and Cooling spoke on the need for this expansion. "At Plum, we are always striving for excellence and to exceed customer expectations. By adding on extra technicians we are making sure that we're fully prepared ahead of the coming busy and hot months."

He also placed emphasis on stocking and providing the best cooling options available in the market in the Plum Heating and Cooling inventory.

"Our entire team of specialists have been thoroughly trained across all products to ensure that our customers receive the best quality, advice and service. Our range of cooling units has also been selected by our professional technicians to ensure they fit them to almost any home in Melbourne."

Plum Heating and Cooling understands the importance of constantly upgrading employee skill sets, as its biggest asset is the crew of trained and experienced technicians.

This is why it regularly engages in employee trainings. A recent program, in fact, enabled Plum Heating and Cooling staff to acquire a Certificate IV qualification.

About the Company

Plum Heating and Cooling was started by Kyle Briggs after finishing a plumbing apprenticeship. From a small one person startup micro-enterprise, it has established a formidable presence as a major provider of interior heating and cooling solutions.

Over the last twenty years, Plum Heating and Cooling's focus on quality has the small shop-front operation based out of Werribee to a Point Cook based warehouse that also stocks company inventory.

Apart from the new staff, the Plum Heating and Cooling crew comprises a highly trained crew of 17 personnel. Plum Heating and Cooling also acquired another factory about two years ago and has a shop-front in Boronia.
