

T & E Moving and Delivery Provides Tips to Finding and Preventing Bedbugs When Moving

---

JACKSONVILLE, FL, USA, August 14, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- With many students moving into college dorms for the first time, the risk of a bedbug infestation is high. T & E Moving and Delivery in Jacksonville, Florida, offers some tips to help protect possessions.

Every September, thousands of teenagers across the country will participate in one of the most important rites of passage as they move into college dorm rooms. For many of them, this will mark their first time living away from home. While parents may have prepared them for handling their own meals and laundry, too often, they forget to teach their children another vital skill, says a Jacksonville-based moving company.

T & E Moving and Delivery, a moving company in Jacksonville, FL, has been operating for more than 10 years. Over the last few years, they have seen an increase in concern among customers when it comes to the spread of bedbugs. The Centers for Disease Control reports that bedbugs have rapidly been spreading across the United States and Canada. Since bedbugs like to hide in bedding, mattresses, and headboards, the dorm is an ideal place for them. All it takes is for one student to bring the pests in, and an outbreak can happen very easily.

As a leading Jacksonville moving company, T & E Moving and Delivery has to take steps between each job to ensure that bedbugs have not made their way into the moving trucks or other equipment. They advise looking into any dark areas to see if there are any traces of bedbugs present. This might mean part of the bedbugs orange and brown outer shell, as they discard the outer shell regularly. Or, it can mean small spots that resemble blood, which are actually bedbug waste.

Finding any of these signs in a dorm room is a good sign that an outbreak of bedbugs is imminent. Students should report any signs of bedbugs to school administrators promptly so the dorm can be sprayed by a professional service.
