The company specializes in leading generator brands, including Cummins-Onan, Beem, and Kohler.

There is no better time of the year to have a generator in Houston at the ready. As this is the height of hurricane season, it follows that sustained power outages and their myriad attendant uncertainties are a given. Houston is no stranger to storm-related power outages.

In September 2008, Houston was ravaged by Hurricane Ike. Even days after the storm, Houston residents found themselves in queues at stores like Home Depot. Many of them wanted generators.

Alas, after a storm it is too late to secure this necessary appliance.

Each brand of generator has its unique characteristics.

Cummins-Onan makes generators for residential, commercial, and governmental use on the road, the water, and in the home.

Beem standby generators are suitable for homes and even RVs. Beem generators require no permits to install, conferring a plug and play capability necessary in today's fast-moving world.

Kohler generators run on either propane or natural gas, and can be used for industrial or residential applications.

No matter the brand of generator a consumer prefers, he can find it at A&A Genpro. He can also trust that the Houston generator company will offer the best price possible on the appliance, and that installation and service after the sale will be reliable.

A&A Genpro: Houston's first choice for generators. This generator company in Houston proudly installs generators for commercial and residential customers in Sugar Land, Katy, Memorial, Hedwick, The Woodlands, Spring, Kingwood, Humble, Cypress, Baytown, Friendswood and surrounding areas.
