The public adjusters in Charlotte at Piedmont Disaster Services have dealt with natural disasters, including tornadoes, hurricanes, lightning, floods and fires, and know that these situations, which are usually covered by insurance, may not be a matter of simple paperwork for the property owner to navigate. When anyone has experienced the trauma of any kind of structural disaster, chances are detailed paperwork and complicated insurance processes are the last things they want to face, particularly when so much is at financial stake.

Piedmont Disaster Services, LLC’s experienced public adjusters are able to connect their clients with a team of insurance experts who know all aspects involved in submitting insurance claims that are necessary due to fire damage, water damage and flooding, or any other type of residential or business insurance claims.

“We hire public adjusters for the people, to ensure proper representation for our clients against the insurance companies, if necessary,” said Ron Pierce, a company spokesperson. He adds that in many cases there is no guarantee that clients who have gone through a recent disaster will receive an acceptable payment from their insurance companies.

In addition, the company offers the following tips, which will aid people in dealing with insurance companies—before a disaster strikes:

- Make sure insurance coverage has been updated as it tends to change over time.
- Reexamine policies to make sure there is adequate repair and replacement coverage.

- List and record all possessions in the home or business; it does not pay to rely on memory, particularly in a crisis.
- Provide a safe place for all critical papers that involve the locations to be claimed for insurance.

Piedmont Disaster Services stresses that to plan for a disaster is to be prepared should a serious tragedy occur. It will always benefit a home or business owner to seek the help of a public insurance adjuster who can help compile data on any building damages, lost possessions, or other important losses.
