NEW YORK,, NY, USA, October 9, 2013 /

EINPresswire.com/ -- The general public is mostly unaware of the potential of turning a profit with hedge funds. Hedge funds are nothing more than another option for investing their money with the hopes of financial increase. They can be a bit complicated and that is why there are hedge fund managers. A hedge fund manager should be seasoned and proven before working with them. Investors generally prefer not to want to risk their money with a novice. There can be a lot of moving parts with hedge funds. The goal of all hedgefund managers is to bring the investor with a profit irregardless of market shifts.

When Did Hedge Funds Begin?

Way back in the Roaring 20s, a man by the name of Alfred W. Jones coined the term “hedgefund” that is commonly heard today. The concept was new then. Since the 1920s, hedge funds have gone through all the market ups and downs. With these ups and downs, come seasons of varying popularity. The financial world was turned upside down, in recent years. The housing bubble popped and this spurred on trying times for the banking and credit industry. During these tough times, hedge funds cam under closer scrutiny and began to be regulated in the United States.

If an investor, is looking to broaden their understanding of hedge funds, they should take advantage of this online education. The history of hedge funds can be easily understood and broken down in these free online videos. The videos can be watched on a desktop, laptop, smart pad, or cell phone. Basically, they can be watched on any device that will play a Youtube video. The first published video in the series called “Joseph Healey HedgeFund” can now be viewed online.

Why Watch Videos?

Youtube is one of the top ten websites in the United States. Youtube gets over 72 billion hours of video played each year. With statistics like that, it's easy to see why video was such an obvious choice for our hedgefund education series. Many people do not realize how popular and useful web videos are. They are one of the most powerful learning tools today.
