

Donald Trump's FundAnything.com Surpasses $1 Million for Magician Penn Jillette

FundAnything is the New "Go To" Crowdfunding Site for Hollywood

GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA, USA, November 7, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- FundAnything.com, the crowdfunding site launched in May by billionaire Donald Trump and partner Bill Zanker of The Learning Annex, has produced two (2) $1 million dollar movie campaigns in 100 days. With crowdfunding successes for Penn Jillette's film "Director's Cut," and Adam Carolla's film "Road Hard," the fast-growing site has won Hollywood's full attention, and is becoming the "Go To" site for hi-profile film projects.

"This is the second million dollar crowdfunded movie campaign for FundAnything in our first six months of existence," said Zanker. "It took Kickstarter two years for one of its movie campaigns to break the $1 million mark, and Indiegogo hasn't had a million dollar movie yet."

Penn Jillette, of Penn and Teller fame, chose the FundAnything site over others to crowdfund for his movie when he learned that his former Celebrity Apprentice "boss" Donald Trump had launched the crowdfunding site with business partner Zanker. Jillette's movie is a film-within-a-film in which crowdfunding plays a significant role. In the film Jillette plays Herbert Blount, a spine-chilling psychopath who utilizes crowdfunding to buy his way onto a movie set. Blount then kidnaps the beautiful young star and casts her in a terrifying movie of his own.

In addition to FundAnything's record-breaking campaign successes, Donald Trump recently announced a $1 Million Dollar Challenge to the entrepreneur who can develop a crowdfunding campaign on FundAnything.com that breaks the current crowdfunding record.
