

SongSilo Launches Groundbreaking Social Music Collaboration Platform

Website That Allows Music Lovers Worldwide to Create and Connect with Each Other

NEW YORK, NY, USA, November 7, 2013

/EINPresswire.com/ -- SongSilo announced today the launch of a social music collaboration website that allows everyone worldwide the opportunity to create and explore new music as well as connect with a universal community of artists, bands, writers, musicians and music lovers. The platform is open to all, offering everyone the opportunity to explore a world of original music composition and share content.

SongSilo simplifies the music creation experience by allowing creators to place their work directly onto the site. Unlike other sites, no software is necessary. Work is done on line allowing them to work with others without having to go to a recording studio or be together at the same location. It allows individuals with talents in one genre to work with others who are skilled at another. A writer who has written a song can post her words and have a musician on the other side of the world do the track.

“We wanted to give ‘everybody’ who wants to be involved in music an opportunity to create and enjoy the artistry of song,” says Michael Edwards one of the site’s creators. “Not everyone has the tools it takes to create or compose -- whether it be specific skills or equipment. Song Silo changes all that.”

SongSilo’s community of creators spans a huge range of artists in a diverse group of genres. Rock, Disco, Hip Hop, Country, Folk or Pop -- there is a place for everybody.

The site encourages you to share what you hear and allows for feedback. Users can select what they post and follow what they like within the community. It allows everyone from professional to amateur to create and discover new and original tunes.

SongSilo is the brainchild of brothers Michael Edwards, David Edward and Bernard Edwards, Jr. The site is a social music platform that gives users access to the world’s largest community of musicians and song creators.
