

Updated Information Security & ISO 27001 green paper from IT Governance reflects 2013 changes

IT Governance has released an 'Introduction to Information Security & ISO 27001' green paper, which reflects the latest changes to the ISO 27001:2013.

BENELUX, BENELUX, BENELUX, November 18, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- IT Governance, the market leader in information security and ISO 27001 has released an 'Introduction to Information Security & ISO 27001' green paper, which reflects the latest changes to the ISO 27001:2013 version of the standard. The green paper can be downloaded for free from the IT Governance EU website.

The green paper highlights the importance of ISO 27001 as a best practice guidance for all aspects of information security, giving stakeholders the assurance that their information is securely handled.

Alan Calder, Founder and Executive Chairman of IT Governance, says: "ISO 27001 is simply the best protection available for organisations wanting to secure their information assets within a best practice framework. Well over 17,500 organisations around the world have discovered the benefits of being certified, including peace of mind for management and reassurance for customers. The 2013 update will make it much simpler and more attractive for a wider range of organisations to sign up.

Written by ISO 27001 expert, Alan Calder, this green paper answers:

- * What is ISO 27001? How does this standard help organisations manage their information security more effectively?
- * What is the relationship between ISO 27001 and ISO 27002?
- * What is the value of ISO 27001 certification?
- * How does ISO 27001 relate to ISO 9001?
- * What does one need to know to initiate, or take on responsibility for, an organisational information security project and, specifically, one that is intended to lead to ISO 27001 certification?

The green paper contains links to useful online resources and tools for anyone tasked with leading an information security project. It can be downloaded from: www.itgovernance.eu/t-green-papers.aspx.

The paper is suitable for all European organisations, across all sectors, particularly those in Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Netherlands, Spain, Germany, Poland, Slovakia and Italy.
