

Cari McCue Chosen as a 2013 Woman of Influence in Correspondent Lending

Guardian Mortgage Company's own Cari McCue is honored in HousingWire's 2013 Women of Influence recognition program

PLANO, TEXAS, USA, December 9, 2013

/EINPresswire.com/ -- HousingWire recently named Cari McCue, Executive Vice-President and Chief Administrative Officer of Guardian Mortgage Company, Inc., as one of the mortgage industry's leading women of influence. These women are helping to drive the U.S. housing economy forward through their leadership within their companies, the mortgage industry and the government.

One of the key characteristics of these women, according to HousingWire, is that their influence is ultimately reflected in action and measurable results within the mortgage industry. Through their efforts, these women are creating a more stable housing economy and guiding government regulations.

"It is a true honor to be recognized as part of the 2013 class of Women of Influence," states Cari McCue. "Guardian Mortgage has always strived to set the bar for performance, ethics and education within the industry. Being recognized in this way is a direct reflection of the importance Guardian Mortgage places on improving the regulations, rules and the daily operations of the mortgage and mortgage banking industry."

Guardian Mortgage Company is extremely proud of Cari's recognition and the personal responsibility she has taken to impact government regulations and overall impression of the U.S. housing economy.
