Hacking attacks are daily increasing and yet a lack of robust information security management is still the norm for most European companies. It is now not a matter of if an organisation will be attacked but when. Mitigating the damage those inevitable attacks will cause is essential. IT Governance wants to educate every European organisation that although they are not safe from cyber attacks there is a solution.

IT Governance recommends that European organisations implement an information security management system (ISMS) in line with the internationally recognised information security standard ISO/IEC 27001:2013.

Alan Calder, Founder and Executive Chairman of IT Governance, is an acknowledged international cyber security guru and a leading author on information security and IT governance issues. Join Alan on February 12th for your chance to learn more about how to avoid cyber attacks and ask your questions on the topic.
