The AFC and NFC championship games will take place this afternoon as Tom Brady and the New England Patriots travel to Sports Authority Field Stadium to take on Peyton Manning and the Denver Broncos at 3:00 ET. Following that game, the 49ers and Seahawks will collide from CenturyLink Field Stadium, as two heated rivals from the NFC west division will go head to head at 6:30 ET.

Kicking off the day's action on Sunday will be a matchup between two teams that feature Quarterbacks heading to the Hall of Fame. Tom Brady, comes in to this AFC championship game as a three-time Super Bowl champion, and has New England in position to earn a trip to the Super Bowl for the sixth time since turning professional back in 2000. During the regular season the 36 year old put together another successful season, as he threw for 4,343 yards, 25 TD's and only 11 interceptions.

Peyton Manning, is arguably the most dominant QB in the history of the National Football League in the regular season, but has managed to win only one Super Bowl in 16 years. The 37 year was nothing short of spectacular in 2013, and put up record breaking numbers. Manning, threw for a impressive 5,477 yards, 55 touchdowns, and had just 10 interceptions, while the supporting cast is explosive, and features two wideouts in Eric Decker and Demaryius Thomas, who both went over 1,200 yards on the season.

In the NFC conference two of the top defensive teams in the National Football League will square off for the title game. The 49ers enter the Championship game clicking on all cylinders and riding high on a six game winning streak. San Francisco, is arguably the most physical teams in football and ranked 3rd in rushing in the NFL during the regular season. With the return of WR Michael Crabtree from a torn Achillies tendon, the 49ers offensive attack is very well balanced, and playing at a high level entering today's title game.

Seattle, is the division leading champion in the NFC west, and coming off a season in which they finished with a 13-3 record. The Seahawks, come in ranked No.1 overall in defense, and were 7-1 at home during the regular season. In week 2 the team dominated the 49ers at CenturyLink Field Stadium en route to a 29-3 victory.

25 year old Russell Wilson is only in his second season, but the QB is at the top of the list when it comes to efficiency, and already among the elite Quarterbacks in the National Football League. The versatile 5-11, 206 pounder ran a 4.55 40 yard dash at the NFL draft two years ago, and has the ability to operate from the pocket, as well as run the football with success. Wilson, ended the regular season with 26 TD's, 9 interceptions and threw for 3,357 yards.
