"Laser gum therapy has proven successful for patients in my

New York dental practice," says Dr. Puglisi. "It is the perfect treatment for periodontal infection with minimal impact."

Dr. Puglisi says that he is confident that the laser gum treatments that he and his dental staff have performed on their patients has had an impact on reducing the risks for a whole host of serious medical conditions.

"With the new year well underway, many people are trying to stick to a healthier routine," says Dr. Puglisi. "They may achieve this by joining a gym or eating healthier foods, but it can also be achieved through effective gum disease treatment."

According to Dr. Puglisi, the bacteria that cause periodontal disease often spread from the mouth to other areas of the body, making us more vulnerable to certain health issues. By eliminating gum disease, laser gum surgery prevents the spread of infection and the development of serious health problems.

"In terms of comfort, the biggest benefit of laser gum therapy for patients is that there is no cutting or stitching," says Dr. Puglisi. "This means that, following laser gum therapy, patients can leave the dental office and continue on with their daily routine."

In fact, according to Dr. Puglisi, the discomfort typically associated with gum disease treatment is minimal, making laser gum therapy a popular method for gum disease treatment.
