When it comes to popularity, the RBS Six Nations tournament is at the top of the list when it comes to die hard enthusiasts from across the globe looking forward to tuning in to catch their favorite team on a week to week basis. Just like the National Football League in the United States, the Six Nations has a worldwide fan base, and millions of fans eagerly awaiting in high anticipation, the start of the next season.

Wales, comes in as the defending champion and will be looking to win the RBS Six Nations tournament for a third consecutive year. It was the first time the team won back to back championships in 35 years, when they came away as champion in 1978 and 1979. The team finished with a impressive 4-1 record overall. Wales, will take on Italy on opening weekend, and the match is set to begin at 14:30 GMT. Wales vs Italy live stream online kicks off from the Millennium Stadium on Saturday.

Expected to challenge Wales could be the England squad which put together a successful season in 2013, but came up short on the final weekend of the tournament, when they were dominated 30-3 to Wales, and lost in convincing fashion at Millennium Stadium in Cardiff.

With England battling through injuries, the younger players such as Jack Nowell and Luther Barrell will be making their debut in the starting lineup, while 23 year old Gloucester back Jony May, earned his second start for the England squad. England will take on France at Stade de France in Paris, and France vs England live stream online is expected to kickoff at 17:00 GMT. In other games Ireland and Scotland will go head to head on Sunday

From a talent standpoint France is arguably the best team in the tournament, but in 2013 the team was a disappointment when they finished with just 1 win in 5 games. The squad is ranked 5th overall in the IRB world rankings, and features a talented supporting cast of players such as Wesley Fofana, Gael Fickou, Thierry Dusautoir, Louis Picamoles and Maxime Medard.

Six Nations Rugby is considered one of the most competitive leagues in Rugby because it features four teams that are among the top 10 in the world in Scotland, Wales, France, Ireland and each is expected to participate in the 2015 World Cup.
