

Celebrity Clairvoyant & Best Selling Author Goes Mainstream

LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, February 20, 2014

/EINPresswire.com/ -- What does an heir to a billion dollar fortune, prison inmates, combatants fighting the war on terror, clergy, media stars & ordinary moms & dads have in common? They're clients of Psychic Jack Rourke.

Are psychics replacing psychotherapists? Who would confide personal problems and desires to someone claiming extrasensory ability? Most "normal" individuals don't admit to such a thing. Chances are, however, there's a surprising number of highly respected people out there in communities across America secretly relying on a clairvoyant confidant.

A 2002 CBS news poll found that 57% of the population believe in ESP while a similar 2005 Gallup survey states that only 41% of Americans believe in psychic phenomena. Despite an apparent decline in public support for paranormal perception though, for celebrity clairvoyant Jack Rourke, business is good.

Jack Rourke is a surprisingly grounded individual. One might pass him on the street without ever considering he is a man who's used his reported ability to counsel billionaires, people who covertly fly America's most sophisticated drones, medical doctors, attorneys, cops and just about any other respected professional one can imagine.

"The days when only simple minded and emotionally vulnerable people go to psychics are over. Psychics are relatively mainstream although it's understandable why a reputable person would keep their relationship with their psychic private. There are just too many self-professed sensitives misrepresenting the service properly motivated, genuine psychics provide," says Jack.

common. Examining the praise he's cataloged from former clients tells a different story though. It demonstrates Jack's psychic goes much deeper. One man, who asked to remain anonymous writes, "Everything you told me in our reading more than a year ago has come true with regard to my job. I was recruited after my first year to work in a dream-come-true clandestine assignment just like you said. I do think of you from time to time and how powerful your readings were." Another woman says, "As a scientist and medical professional, I place high value on rational, ego-less, non-dogmatic ways of discerning what IS true from what I wish to be true. Jack surpassed on all counts, and with a palpable, grounded sincerity. Months after my reading, the benefits still continue."

Learning a fresh perspective on psychic phenomena as well as the people that offer this secretly sought after and valuable service is an interesting conversation worth having.

Jack Rourke is one of the most prominent working psychics in North America today. Dubbed "world renowned" by the celebrity news site "pop-star" dot com, he is a skilled and compassionate professional offering superior psychic service to individuals, business and law enforcement. Jack earned the title "world renowned" because of his work on criminal and missing person's cases, the fact his predictions and commentary have been distributed world wide by CNN and the Associated Press, and because his client base extends well beyond the continental United States.

Jack is the author of the best-selling book The Rational Psychic™ - A Skeptic's Guide to extraordinary Perception. A seer for the modern age, Jack puts aside the exotic beliefs from our grandmother's time and helps everyday people with real world problems using straight forward terms and when required, tough love.

Jack Rourke has also been featured on ABC, NBC, FOX, the History and Travel channels, Showtime, the BBC and more. He's consulted on major Hollywood films. And, in 2009 he was featured as the real life "Patrick Jane" in a special documentary included within the first season DVD release of the hit TV show The Mentalist. In this short film Jack discusses psychic police work along side former FBI and other experts.
