

IT Governance partners with the Data Protection Association

IT Governance has announced the start of a new partnership with the Data Protection Association headquartered in Nashville, Tennessee in the USA.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, USA, March 11, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- IT Governance, the global single-source provider of information security and data protection products and services, has announced the start of a new partnership with the Data Protection Association headquartered in Nashville, Tennessee in the USA.

The Data Protection Association is a membership organization which was formed to promote the growth, education and networking opportunities of those in the Data Protection Industry. Following the partnership DPA's members will be entitled to 10% discount from IT Governance's online bookstore: www.itgovernanceusa.com/shop.

Alan Calder, Founder and Executive Chairman of IT Governance, says, "We are delighted to partner with the Data Protection Association and offer their members added value in the form of a discount on cutting edge data protection and information security resources."

Stephen Richards, President of the Data Protection Association added, "One of the aims of the Data Protection Association is to improve education for its members and add resources to enable this education. The Board recognized a need to give access to industry related materials to our members, so the Partnership with IT Governance not only achieves the objectives of the Board but also adds value to being a member of the Association by way of a discount on the materials that the members can purchase."

IT Governance's online bookstore provides a wide range of standards, books and documentation toolkits that are designed to help data protection professionals meet their project and compliance requirements. All DPA members are entitled to 10% discount and can access to bookstore here: www.itgovernanceusa.com/shop.
