

How To Break Into The App Store's Top Chart Even If You Are Not A Developer

LONDON, UK, March 14, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Chupamobile is democratizing the app business. A new approach to the app development that is revolutionizing the market and making it easier and less expensive than ever to launch and distribute a professional app or game.

Breaking into the App Store top chart has never been so easy, with just a few dollars and a couple of hours of work it is now possible to launch a professional App or a Game even if you are not a developer.

How to do that? As previously featured on Wired, Tiny Flying Drizzy, a Flappy Bird style game that went number one in the App Store free chart, or the Flappy Miley Cyrus app that is also riding high on the rank, have been created starting from one of the App Templates available on Chupamobile, the marketplace with the largest catalogue of ready-made Apps and Games. It works like this: Developers sell their App or Game source code license to users that, instead of starting from scratch, can just replace design and sound of the template with their own files and quickly be ready to launch their own app on the App Stores. Minimal effort, maximum result.

To make it even easier, Chupamobile has just launched a "Reskin and Launch" service for those who don't have the time or the knowledge to customize their own app. Chupamobile offers a large variety of customization services, like App Reskinning, New Features integration and App Submission, with prices starting from only $400.

"The amount of assets you need to change makes this one of the easiest re-skins you will come across. Cheap price, huge trend and addicting gameplay makes for a great ROI on your investment." said Vojtech Svarc, seller of the Flappy Crocodile source code.

If until recently only a few could list their own mobile applications on the app stores, from now on everybody is going to be able to easily launch his own app within a few days and very little work and expenses. A new approach to the app business that is revolutionizing the market and making it easier and less expensive than ever to launch and distribute a professional app or game.
