HOUSTON, TX, USA, June 27, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo understands that the cure for cancer won't come easily. As a longtime medical professional, researcher and professor, she knows that finding the solution for cancer will require the skills, research and dedication of committed medical professionals; people are passionate about their work and who will stop at nothing to find a cure.

The American Association for Cancer Research is devoted to both preventing and curing the multiple forms of cancer currently afflicting people around the globe. Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo is a member of the AACR, and is committed to both the organization's mission and to the values it depends on to succeed. As Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo understands, the AACR is comprised of some of the best medical institutions and professionals in the medical community, and works to foster cancer research efforts through its multiple services and programs.

Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo is an associate professor at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, one of the premiere cancer research and academic institutions in the country and the world. As a medical professional who focuses on cancer treatment, research and education, she relies on the AACR for the latest in cancer research information, and believes that the AACR is an excellent resource of research and education-related information for anyone working in the oncology field. Like many of her professional medical colleagues across the country, Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo has come to trust the AACR for its continued commitment to the promotion of cancer research, as well as the many useful informational and educational tools the organization strives to provide the medical community.

According to the American Association for Cancer Research website, there are over 200 forms of cancer currently plaguing people around the globe. Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo is one of over 34,000 AACR members, which is comprised of dedicated professionals from industry, government, laboratories, clinics, and medical institutions from across the country. AACR membership is united in one common goal, which is to eradicate all forms of cancer for good. This is possible, says the AACR, through the dissemination of information, the promotion of education and training, and through the advancement of understanding of every aspect of the cancer research and treatment process.

Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo is an active member in many professional organizations that are working towards an end to cancer. She is a member of the European Society of Medical Oncology, the American Society of Clinical Oncology, the Sociedad Colombiana de Hematologia y Oncologia, the Sociedad Paraguaya de Oncologia and an honorary member of the Sociedad Colombiana de Mastologia. Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo is passionate about not only discovering and developing better treatment, but also about working with like-minded professionals who share her commitment to and passion about the creation of a cancer-free future.

The AACR, along with many other important and well-known medical associations, are currently making an effort to better understand this life-threatening ailment. Many medical professionals, such as Dr. Ana Maria Gonzalez-Angulo, are committed to finding a cancer cure, and are working non-stop to end the life-threatening impact of cancer once and for all.
