All e-publications created by the HTML5 digital brochure software are accessible by audiences on all devices including personal computers, android devices, iPads and iPhones. The publications will also be accessible via all major mobile platforms, which include iOS, Android and Win8. This cross-platform compatibility is what makes HTML5 Digital Brochure Publishing unique and thereby appealing to customers around the globe.

Cross-platform compatibility is becoming more and more important for the digital publishing industry in the 21st century as consumers are moving towards reading, sharing, browsing and shopping on mobile phones, tablets and other portable devices. Since a majority of these appliances are touch devices the HTML5 application supports gestures such as spread, pinch, swipe, and drag which in effect makes the page zoom in or out, allow users to browse through pages, and navigate a page respectively. By doing so the application ensures maximum reader satisfaction and gives the reader an efficient and enjoyable reading experience.

Other features of the HTML5 digital brochure software include the ability to create digital catalogs from PDF, built-in page editors and rich media, animation editors, the use of advanced technology including the provision of cloud platforms, an advertising banner feature, access to reader statistics, batch conversions and text versions for Search Engine Optimization.
