

Primus Green Energy to present at the 17th annual Gas to Liquids Conference in London

SMi Group reports: Robert Johnsen, CEO, Primus Green Energy, will be presenting at the 17th annual Gas to Liquids Conference (London, 29-30 October, 2014)

LONDON, LONDON, UK, July 29, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Earlier this year Primus Green Energy Inc. announced that it has developed a small-scale gas-to-liquids solution for flared gas applications using the company's proprietary STG+ technology. Mr. Robert Johnsen, CEO, Primus Green Energy, will be speaking on Day 1 of the SMi's Gas-to-Liquids-2014 conference, discussing one of the biggest challenges facing the oil and gas industry today - Flared Gas Resources, in his unique presentation entitled "Monetizing Flared Gas Resources via High-Efficiency, Small-Scale Gas-to-Liquids Technology."

150B cubic meters of natural gas are flared in oilfields across the world each year, resulting in an estimated 350M tons of harmful GHG emissions each year. This flaring often occurs in remote oilfield locations, where limited to no pipeline infrastructure exists to transport the gas to market. This challenge represents a huge opportunity for small-scale GTL – New technologies that enable the deployment of cost-effective, small-scale gas-to-liquids plants can help oil and gas producers capture the flared gas on-site and monetize the resources currently being wasted.

Join Gas-to-Liquids 2014 this October and hear from Primus Green Energy and other top-ranked speakers about current and emerging GTL projects across Europe, Africa, Japan, the Middle East and North America and the latest developments within the industry. Now in its 17th year, this is the leading industry event in London visited by over a hundred experts from around the world.
