We congratulate Mauri on this amazing accomplishment that requires years of practice and an intense exam. Earning his board certification is a significant achievement for both Mauri and the firm.”

Only six percent of eligible Florida Bar members are board certified. A lawyer who is a member in good standing of The Florida Bar and who meets the standards prescribed by the state's Supreme Court may become board certified. Board certified lawyers' experience and competency have been rigorously evaluated, and they are the only Florida lawyers allowed to refer to themselves as “specialists” or “experts” or to use the letters B.C.S. to indicate Board Certified Specialist when referring to their legal credentials.

Certification is The Florida Bar's highest evaluation of attorneys' competency, experience and professionalism in the areas of law approved for specialization. The Florida Bar maintains high standards lawyers must meet before seeking certification. Even if an attorney does meet the stringent application criteria; judges and other lawyers must evaluate the lawyer as to character, ethics and professionalism; and the lawyer must pass a rigorous examination or meet strict criteria to exempt the exam before officially earning board certification.

“We congratulate Mauri on this amazing accomplishment that is no easy feat. The process requires five years of practice, as well as an intense exam among other things. Mauri currently leads the association litigation practice and is general counsel to many of the firm's association clients. Earning his board certification is a significant achievement for both him and the firm,” commented founding partner, Jane Bolin.
