

Vancouver Based Tech Company 2Dots Launches Innovative Digital conferencing Platform yWorld

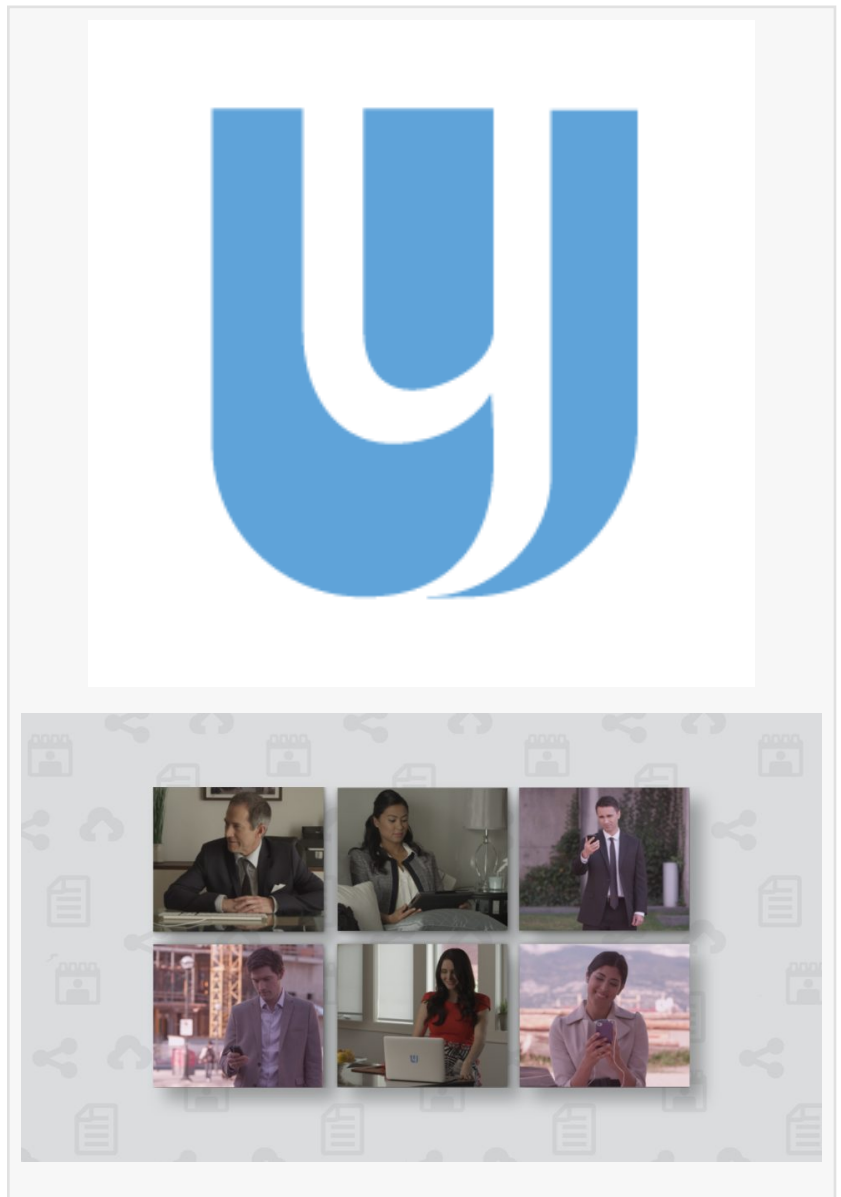

VANCOUVER, BC., CANADA, August 12, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Founded in Canada's new largest tech hub, Vancouver based 2Dots Incorporated, is pleased to announce that they have developed an advanced state-of-the-art video conferencing platform "yWorld.com". Streamlining the way we collaborate and communicate, yWorld's innovative features include: free unlimited cloud storage, six-way HD video chat, shared document editing, real-time whiteboard collaboration, and integrated voice, video and text communication.

"This platform has the ability to meet all conferencing needs by eliminating unnecessary physical meetings and allowing users to share, create, collaborate and chat simultaneously with their contacts." - Bayan Knight

Vancouver is fast becoming "Silicon Valley North" with Facebook, Microsoft, Sony Pictures, Imageworks and soon Amazon all moving here. 2Dots Incorporated is excited to be positioned in Vancouver during this new tech boom. The company is rapidly expanding with 28 employees and many new job openings on the horizon.

"It is very exciting to see Vancouver becoming such a big player in the tech industry. We have a huge talent pool now, and it is just a matter of time before more companies move here from across the border" yWorld founder Kehar Gill said in a statement.

Seeing the value and the future potential of yWorld's technology, the company turned down an acquisition offer from another high profile company while in their alpha stage, and instead secured significant private funding to complete their first phase of development.

“Transforming the time users spend online, yWorld is a productive and indispensable career-booster. We are very excited about this new initiative, with rapid company growth and many new job openings” yWorld founder Kehar Gill said in a statement.
