members and employees from allergens in the air is a job that the HealthPro Plus by IQ Air does particularly well, according to the Virginia mold specialist company Mold Aid. In reviews by Mold Aid owner John Taylor, he notes, "The award-winning HealthPro Plus is even helpful for those with health conditions aggravated by mold, such as asthma, skin conditions, and staff and fungal infections."

Such notable publications as Consumer Guide, Consumer Digest, Wired, Allergy Buyer's Club, and more back up the Mold Aid reviews with accolades such as "Best Air Purifier", "Best Buy," and "Product of the Year."

The filters in the unit are effective at blocking four categories of household pollutants:

- Allergen control of mold spores, pet dander, house dust mites, and pollen
- Light odors, including pet odor, musty odor, cooking odors, and paint odors
- Molecular control of Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) and gaseous chemicals
- Complex air pollution control of light tobacco smoke, fires, and general indoor air pollution concerns

The advanced filtration features of the HealthPro Plus make it particularly effective in eliminating micro-particles, destroying airborne chemicals, and eliminating VOCs, bacteria, viruses, and combustion particles.

Having a HealthPro Plus air purifier in a home or office is an ideal complement to the services of Mold Aid, a local company that is a division of Acquired Home Services. As specialists in mold testing and mold remediation, the company also provides services such as thermal imaging and air duct cleaning.

While a visit from a Mold Aid technician is still needed to verify air quality or handle mold remediation after water damage, operating a high quality HealthPro Plus air purifier can help get rid of mold spores and other pollutants before they become a danger.
