

European Home Announces Element4 240 Series Gas Fireplaces

New 240 Series line features a 95-inch wide heat-tempered single pane of glass...

MALDEN, MA, USA, August 25, 2014 /EINPresswire.com/ -- European Home, a Massachusetts fireplace manufacturer and importer, has announced the release of the Element4 240 Series line of gas fireplaces.

Comprised of two models, the Modore 240 and the Tenore 240, the 240 Series features a 95-inch wide single piece of ceramic glass and one flue. The 240 Series is the only fireplace line of this size on the market which combines a single, seamless piece of glass without the requirement of a power vent.

The width of the Element4 240 Series is significant. Until now, gas fireplaces over seven feet wide had to be custom-made if the consumer wanted to incorporate one sheet of glass versus two. The Element4 240 Series, measuring at 95 inches (7' 9") gives architects and homeowners the aesthetic they're seeking at a considerably lower price point than custom designs.

In addition, the Element4 240 Series line simplifies installation as only a single flue is needed (some fireplace designs require two flues). The 240 Series also eliminates the need for a power vent system – such venting systems can add significantly to installation costs.

"The Element4 240 Series draws influence from a minimalist aesthetic tradition," says Holly Markham, President of European Home. "Their dramatic linear proportions give them unmistakable contemporary European feel; their clean lines and impressive size definitely set them apart from other gas fireplaces."

"We are in the process of installing the see-through Tenore 240 in a 12,000 square foot house. The fireplace will sit between two 25 foot by 40 foot rooms," comments Jack Ackert, Owner of Fairview Hearthside in Poughkeepsie, NY. Ackert goes on to say, "The dramatic size and European design added a much needed focal point and an aesthetic the client required."
