Will the arguments come to a end? The BCS system is buried and this year's NCAA football will go to a new playoff. The system will feature a total of four teams playing for a golden opportunity to advance to the final game of the season. No.1 team will play the No.4 team in one semifinal. The No. 2 team will play the No.3 team in the other semifinal. The winners will meet for the championship of College Football on January 12, at AT&T stadium in Dallas.

Over the years, arguments have been made that a playoff system should be put in place to determine the true champion of College Football. The playoff puts a end to the BCS system, which was introduced in 1998 and came to a end in 2013. Participating teams in the four-team tournament will be selected by a committee of 13 experts as well as seedings.

Florida State, enters the season as the defending champion after coming away with a 34-31 win over the Auburn Tigers in the 2014 BCS National championship game. The Seminoles, will start this year's season the same way it ended the last one, the No 1 team in the country.
